

Remembrance DAY

11 NOVEMBER 2018

At 11 am on 11 November 1918 the Great War came to an end. More than 60,000 Australians were among the millions who had lost their lives. Since then, Australian men and women have continued to risk their lives serving in our defence forces. Photographs of one hundred members of the Royal Australian Air Force who have served during the past century have been combined to create this portrait of Lieutenant Alexander Finnie, who served with the AIF at Gallipoli and was later killed in France as a pilot with the 4th Squadron, Australian Flying Corps.
