11 NOVEMBER 2018

At 11 am on 11 November 1918 the Great War came to an end. More than 60,000 Australians were among the millions who had lost their lives. Since then, Australian men and women have continued to risk their lives serving in our defence forces. Photographs of one hundred members of the Australian Army who have served during the past century have been combined to create this portrait of Private Frederick James Adams, 8th Battalion, who was killed in action during the landings at Gallipoli.
